CAMP NATCHES
LOOKING GOOD

Fred Bratto and Scott Hane are in town from Natches, the gold camp at Barber canyon. They state that most of the claim owners at that place are busy working on their properties and making preparations for the winter. A number of cabins are being built and a large amount of development work is going on. The camp is assuming good proportions and will be heard from as a gold producer in the near future.

On the D. F. McCarthy property sinking is going on and the ore which is being extracted is sacked as fast as it is taken out from the shaft. These claims have good showings of ore in ledges of great width that have every indication of permanency. Mr. McCarthy is building houses and otherwise preparing for more extensive work.

A few days ago a strike of ore was made near the McCarthy property that eclipses anything before found in the camp. The ledge is large and the ore shows any quantity of visible gold.

C. Gurney is having lumber hauled and will erect houses on his property, and another cabin is being erected by R. Walther.

F. Grimmon is working steadily on his claims and is taking out good ore. Jack Bishop has made a good strike of ore at Butcher springs, one mile from Natches.

Besides those mentioned, there are many prospectors working claims all over the camp and the ore which is being uncovered is mostly all of similar character, showing the hematite cubes and free gold.

HIS MISTAKE.

"The neighbors complain that you are maintaining a nuisance."
"I wish you'd speak to my wife about it; it's her fault."
"It's her dog then?"
"Oh, it's the dog you've come about. I thought it was my mother-in-law."—Exchange.

SACKING ORE
ON EAGLE'S NEST

The Eagle's Nest estate is now being worked by a lease, commonly known as the "Webber" lease, but incorporated as Fairview Eagle's Nest Mining company, with a capital stock of 300,000 shares, par value $1; the contract calls for the company workings, with block of ground extending 300 feet on the vein, eighteen months time is allowed for mining purposes, with two years after the expiration of that time to handle any and all product of the mine that may be brought to the surface during the eighteen months. The leasing company has been working two months under the management of Charles R. Murdoch; the equipment consists of a 22-horsepower hoist, which has been running about three weeks. The management announces that it is prepared to erect a mill at any time necessary for working low grade products, of which there is already a substantial dump.

At the time the Eagle's Nest company work was shut down there were two 50-foot shafts, the collar of one on the vein at the apex being fifty feet higher than the lower shaft. From the 50-foot level of the lower shaft a northerly drift was run about fifty feet at the time of the shut down; intermittent values were found in this drift, but no ore body of consequence was encountered there. There was also considerable drifting from the 50-foot level of the upper shaft by the company.

Starting at the face in the northerly drift from the 50-foot level of the lower shaft, Manager Murdoch turned at a slight angle to the right and with seventy feet of drifting cut squarely into the vein at a point giving him 100 feet of depth thereon, and which is now referred to, as the crosscut at the 100 level, as fifty feet of depth is gained by working from the lower shaft. Eighteen feet of ore was intersected, of which twelve feet is a good grade of milling; several streaks of extremely rich quartz were developed also, and sacking of better than $150 values for shipping was continued until sinking was resumed; two drifts, one each on the hanging and foot walls, were then started and continued until the management was satisfied with the demonstration at that point; considerable extremely rich oxidized quartz was taken from these drifts, and many assays running between $600 and $1400 were yielded in the progress of the work there.

Four weeks ago the hoisting plant was put in commission and sinking started; so rapid has been the progress that on yesterday but two sets remained to be put in before the crosscut at the 200-level shall be started. Better than three feet per day, including the timbering, has been made, and it certainly stands as the record shaft of the district for quick sinking. Not later than November 15 the crosscut drift from the bottom of this shaft will be under way.

Early this week work in the ore was resumed at the 100 level, where a raise is being made on the shoot, now yielding tons of shipping grade. A trip to the works yesterday revealed the presence of product that makes dividends, sacked and lined up along the drift, ready to be hoisted to the surface and be sent to the smelter; while much of the ore sacked here is oxidized and very similar to that found near the surface in the Nevada Hills stopes, much of it carries heavy sulphides. While it sounds like an extraordinary statement with Eagle's Nest stock selling at 28 cents per share, the fact is that Manager Murdoch is sacking great quantities of ore that is worth 50 cents per pound, while a solid body of good milling quality is left untouched between the exploratory drifts run on the hanging and foot walls.

Another feature of the work is the winze started from the 100 level on the ore shoot at the foot wall. This winze, together with the raise, is for the double purpose of producing ore and furnishing air for this level and creating circulation when the 200 level is connected up.—Fairview News.

LEASERS WORKING
BLACKHORSE MINE

The Windsplitter claim at Blackhorse, owned by Will Hamilton, is the scene of the greatest excitement in White Pine county. The occasion of the commotion is due to a recent gold strike on that property, mentioned in these columns some days since.

On a portion of the claim, which is heavily covered with sagebrush, a crew of miners while doing the assessment work opened up an ore body near the surface which shows astonishing values in gold. Two pounds of the ore was tested at Osceola and was found to be worth $2.50 in the yellow metal.

As soon as the news of the strike became generally known, numerous parties were striving to get leases. According to latest reports ten leasers are now working on that claim.

Young and Pepper, and Kiger and McQueen, pioneers of the Blackhorse district, had an opportunity to get hold of the choice ground, and are now taking out rich gold ore for shipment. Owing to the fact that they could not purchase ore sacks, the ore will be allowed to remain on the dump until sacks are obtainable.

The other leasers have not been so fortunate as the old-time Blackhorse men. They are pushing work with all possible energy, however, and hope to strike the same vein from which the rich ore is now being extracted.

The Windsplitter is situated in a desirable portion of the district, adjoining the Blackhorse claim, the original location and the claim from which the camp received its name, and is only a short distance from the San Pedro and Mabel mines, owned by the Amalgamated Nevada Mines and Power company.—Ely Expressor.

OBJECT TO GOLD.

New Yorkers Want Paper Instead of Coin.

A correspondent of the Sacramento Bee sends the following from New York:

Cessation of last week's bank runs has brought out a better feeling in business circles, and it is newspaper and street talk that every suspended bank will soon reopen and pay depositors in full. The withdrawal by bank depositors of millions of dollars from circulation has created a money stringency that necessarily leads to curtailment of business a long time. That a great deal of this money has found its way into safe deposit boxes is evidenced by the fact that banks all over New York are paying out gold instead of paper money. When a man with a check to cash objects to receiving five, ten and twenty-dollar gold pieces he is told that the bank is out of small bills, and is compelled to pay him in coin. Ten days ago it was so exceptional to find a gold piece in circulation that the store-keeper taking it invariably examined it carefully and made the remark that the customer must be from the west. Today five-dollar gold pieces are more plentiful than five-dollar bills, and no longer excite comment. Silver dollars are also appearing in large quantities.

A PUZZLE.

An old man had gone to a post-office in Mississippi and offered for the mail a letter that was over the weight specified for a single stamp. "This is too heavy," said the postmaster. "You will have to put another stamp upon it."

The darkie's eyes widened in astonishment. "Will anudder stamp make it any lighter, boss?" he asked. —New Orleans Picayune.

NEW YORK MUST GIVE UP GOLD

WASHINGTON, Nov. 12.—Secretary Cortelyou is greatly annoyed because the New York banks have failed to go to the relief of their Western correspondents to any noticeable extent, and it is reported that he has called for the repayment in five payments, of which the first was due today, of ten per cent of the money he loaned out of the treasury, in order that he shall be able to redistribute it to localities where it is badly needed. Another report from Philadelphia has it that he called for $3,500,000.

There is a general impression that the administration believes the situation in New York to be so good now that it is safe to withdraw some of the government support in order to prop up financial centers which cannot get money due them from reserve agents.

As an illustration of how the banks in the West and South have been pinched, Congressman Garner of Texas said today that a certain bank in his state sent $5,000,000 to its correspondent in New York last summer, on which it received 6 per cent, drawing against it as needed. When the stringency came it found itself unable to get any part of the $5,000,000, but its correspondent let it have what it had to use at 40 per cent.

Since Cortelyou's announcement that the banks had not taken out circulation to the extent expected, there has been greater demand, and the total issue since October 26th now amounts to $17,000,000.

The present difficulties have had the result of giving something of a boom to Postmaster-General Meyer's plan for a postal savings bank, which the administration believes, would have the confidence of the public and bring out hundreds of millions of dollars of hoarded money. The President is reported to take a very favorable view of Meyer's plan.
